THE REYNOLDS FAMILY ASSOCIATION.

EIGHTH ANNUAL REUNION.

REYNOLDS FAMILY ASSOCIATION.

THE eighth reunion of the REYNOLDS FAMILY ASSOCIATION was held at the Morton House, Niantic, Conn., August 30, 1899. Dinner was served to thirty-six members of the Association and their friends. Although the reunion was not the largest in point of numbers, it was a great success, members being present from several States. There were descendants present from the following immigrants:—

The meeting was called to order by the President, W. C. Reynolds, of East Haddam, Conn., who made the following address of welcome:

Brothers, Sisters, Cousins, Kin:

It gives me greatest pleasure to welcome you to our meeting to-day, especially those who are with us for the first time.

Seven years ago we met at Sister Fosdick's, by her invitation—sisters and brothers with our families. The matter of an organization was discussed, and the REYNOLDS FAMILY ASSOCIATION formed. We have met each year, and our Historian's reports tell us of some progress made in collecting material for publication. In her researches it is found that the family has been composed of godly, sober, industrious men; none have been supported at State expense, in jails or almshouses (the nearest approach to this is your humble servant, a Director of the State Prison). Thus far no great orator has been discovered.

Since our last meeting our Chaplain, Deacon Frederick Fosdick, has been removed by death. He was much interested in assisting Mrs. Fosdick with her work, and his loss will be greatly felt in our Association, and also in his town, where he was identified with every good work.

Perhaps there are others who would be interested to know about our gatherings, whose names have never been given to the Secretary; if so, we will gladly add them to our list.

May we who bear the name of REYNOLDS inherit with it all the virtues which have ever accompanied it.

Report of Historian.

My Dear Kinsmen:

In my report of last year I mentioned several small family groups, by the name of Reynolds, who were in New England before 1660—John of Wethersfield, Robert of Boston, William of Providence, John of Weymouth, and John of Norwich. The relationship of these families has not as yet been fully determined, and any attempt to connect all would be the work of a life time, if not a fruitless task.

All agree that the name is an honored one. And without at this time going into its origin, or to Old England, the record shows that from the time the religious refugees of Britain crossed the seas in search of that liberty of conscience denied them in their old home, down to the present, they were patriots and defenders of the New England colonies during the early days of their existence, and active participants in King Philip's War of 1675-76, and in the French and Indian Wars. In the Revolutionary struggle, thirty-eight of this name were in the service of the State of Connecticut.

My own study of this family has been chiefly about John of Weymouth and of Stonington, who first appears in Weymouth in 1660, when a daughter, Mary, was born, and he had land set out in the first and second divisions of that year. In Volume IV., 276, Suffolk deeds, he conveyed this land, with dwelling house, barn, orchard and planting land, to Edwin Grant, of Boston, the deed bearing date September 8, 1664, and said grant to have possession the last day of March, 1665.

About 1650, and probably at Weymouth, John Reynolds married Anne Holbrook, who was the daughter of Thomas and Experience (Leland) Holbrook.

Thomas Holbrook, with his family, came from England and settled in the northern part of Weymouth, on the tide water, a locality which has long borne the name of Old Spain. His name is first found in 1640, but probably at that time he was not a new comer; for there is reason to think he was of the company who in 1624 came from Weymouth in Dorsetshire, England, and having Mr. Barnard as their minister. Mr. Holbrook was a man of some note, being townsman in 1641, '45, '46, '51, '52, '54.

Experience Leland was the daughter of Hopestill Leland, the ancestor through his only son, Henry, of that numerous tribe of Lelands.

The residence of John and Anne Reynolds in Stonington is fixed by Arnold's History of Rhode Island as 1665. On that date Sir Robert Carr, one of the commissioners sent from England to settle boundary disputes, the line between Connecticut and Rhode Island being unsettled, he gave orders to Mr. Stanton to drive out the Rhode Islanders. John Reynolds, being one of these, appealed to the General Court at Hartford for redress.

We have no positive proof of his relationship with the Reynolds family of Rhode Island, but we believe the early emigrants of this name to have been closely related, and as we meet from year to year may we brighten and broaden the chain of friendship which unites us in one family, knowing that this organization is not for our pleasure alone, but to cement the family ties more firmly. We should be inspired with a new and lasting interest in whatever pertains to our family history, so that the forthcoming work of our genealogy may be worthy of the name.

In order not to make my report too lengthy, I have thought it best not to give you a record of each branch, but to give some facts as regards the first and second generations, that it may stimulate the descendants of these lines in their search for a more complete history of the family.

Report of Committee Appointed to Confer with other Branches on Publication of History.

The committee appointed to confer with other branches of the Reynolds Family on publication of history reported that there was a disposition on the part of the other branches to unite in the publication of history embracing the descendants of all families whose surnames were Reynolds, that came to this country prior to the year 1660.

The lines of some other branches not being completed, the committee was continued for another year.

In Memoriam.

Since our last meeting we have been called upon to mourn the loss of one of our most esteemed members, the late Judge Frederick Fosdick, who died January 10, 1899. He was born in Lyme, May 29, 1818. He passed the greater part of his life in his native town. He united with the Baptist Church in North Lyme at an early age, and in 1864 was elected deacon, and faithfully discharged the duties until the day of his death.

Judge Fosdick was always a prime mover in all matters relative to the welfare of the town, and was widely known as a generous, public-spirited man, who rendered invaluable service to the community, his intellectual attainments making him especially eligible to positions of responsibility and trust, and his political career was a long and honorable one. For several years he was one of the selectmen of the town, and at a later period held the office of town clerk for twenty-eight years. In 1870 he was elected judge of probate, and held the office until the age limit was reached. Twice he represented the town in the General Assembly.

The Rev. Mr. Marvin, of Woodbridge, his most intimate friend, said of him: "He was a man of sound judgment, conservative in his beliefs and practices, yet sufficiently progressive to keep in touch with the age. He was honest in his dealings. He was affable and friendly in intercourse, public spirited and broad minded, ever ready to lend a helping hand for the culture and higher interests of society and the prosperity of the church. He was honored with trusts, to which he was ever faithful, respected by his neighbors, beloved by the brethren of his church; and has left behind him a memory fragrant with sweetest sympathies, beautiful with Christian graces."

On motion of Giles L. Reynolds, it was voted that the following amendment to the Constitution be adopted:

That the descendants of all families whose surnames were Reynolds, that came to this country prior to the year 1660, shall be eligible to membership in the REYNOLDS FAMILY ASSOCIATION.

A recess was then taken for the banquet.

The following hour was devoted entirely to the menu, which was served acceptably.

After coffee had been reached, Mr. J. P. Reynolds, of Bristol, R. I., was called on by the President, who spoke as follows:

It is a great pleasure to me, being with you on this occasion. Though we do not yet reach a common ancestor, we naturally believe that he is not very far back. The search for ancestors is always a pleasure, though we do not always find what we had longed for. At a recent meeting of the Sons of the American Revolution, among the invited guests was Col. John Wyman, a noted after-dinner speaker. Several of the members had read papers giving glowing accounts of the courage of their ancestors. Then followed Colonel Wyman. He said that when he first heard of the society he was much pleased, and thought he would like to join. He was told that he must find out about his great-grandfather. He remembered that he had an old aunt at home, so he went to her and said: "Auntie, I want to know about my great-grandfather." "What for, Johnnie?" "Well, I want to join the Sons of the American Revolution, and I must know all about my great-grandfather." "Well, Johnnie," said she, "you better not say anything about your great-grandfather, for he was a Tory, and had to run to save his life." "Well, that rather put a damper on all my hopes, but after hearing all I have heard here to-night about the prowess of the patriots, I have come to the conclusion that my great-grandfather must have been a very brave man to have dared to be a Tory, under the circumstances."

Well, in spite of this incident, I think, taken as a whole, we find much to commend, much to admire, and much to copy after in the lives of those sturdy patriots of the Revolutionary and Colonial Wars. I feel that my remarks to-day must be very short, that it will be impossible to cover all the ground that I might wish, so I will confine myself to a short description of my own home in Bristol, R. I.

In the year 1680, Nathaniel Reynolds, son of Robert, of Watertown, 1634, came to Bristol at the settlement of the town. In the first division of the town lots he took a thirty-second part. On one part of this his son, Joseph, built a house, which is my home. This is the only piece of land in Bristol that has never changed name in two hundred and twenty years. Nathaniel was my great-great-great-great-grandfather, and it has descended to me in direct line through seven generations. In this house during the Revolution, in the year 1778, LaFayette made his headquarters for over ten days, and in this house the present owner is always ready to welcome those members of the family, however distant, who may feel interested to visit the old homestead.

In the collateral lines we find some well-known names, among which are Judge George G. Reynolds, of Brooklyn; the late Dr. Edward Reynolds, of Boston, and his son, Dr. John Phillips Reynolds; the late Rev. Grindall Reynolds, D. D., a noted Unitarian divine.

I feel my time is up. It has been a very pleasant day for me, and I hope to be with you again next year.

Mr. H. L. Garde, of New London, was next called. He said:

The family relation is closely connected with everything that is worthiest and best in society and in the individual. Mingling with our loved ones at home, and breathing its serene atmosphere, we are strengthened and prepared for the storms of life that wait for us "beyond the harbor-bar." All the substitutes that men seek from the saloon and club house to the fraternal lodge and places of amusement, can never satisfy the inborn demand of our natures for the pure joys of home. The curfew law is a wise and salutary regulation to keep the feet of our children from the traps that are set in the darkness of night for the unwary and the innocent.

Far distant be the day when the old-fashioned New England home shall decay; when, following the example of certain Latin nations, whose language has no equivalent for the English word "home," we forget our firesides, and substitute for them some vain, inconstant light that shall suddenly fail and leave us in Egyptian darkness. "He setteth them in families as a flock." God has blessed the family relation, saying: "Honor thy father and mother," and we read of One after whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named. One of the strongest incentives in our struggle to enter in at the strait gate is the hope that in that land that lies at the end of the narrow way, we may find the dear departed—

"And see the angel faces smile
That we have loved long since and lost awhile."

I wish to say a few words about Gamaliel Reynolds, Jr., for whom some of us derive the descent that gives us membership in the REYNOLDS FAMILY ASSOCIATION. He was born in Norwich, 1754, the sixth in line from John the settler. While still a young man he came to Groton, Conn., and learned the saddler's trade, an important trade at that time, when nearly all traveling was done on horseback. Marrying Esther, the daughter of Zebediah Gates, one child was born to them, when the news of the battle of Lexington called the Minute Men of Groton under Lieutenant Spicer to join Captain Coit's company of New London and hasten to Boston. After doing good service under Putnam at the Rail Fence, these brave men returned, many of them enlisting in the Continental Army. Gamaliel Reynolds, Jr., enlisted in the Eighth Connecticut Continental Regiment, Colonel Parsons, and served through the entire war, being one of the best musicians in the army.

Mr. George A. Reynolds, of Hartford, was then introduced, and delightfully entertained the company with an account of "The George A. Reynolds Association," of which he is a member.

Mr. William H. Reynolds, of Cromwell, Iowa, was the next speaker.
