HISTORY OF THE COUNTY OF SAN DIEGO

Collecting a history of San Diego County, though it sounds like a simple project, has been more difficult than collecting the Reynolds names. Out of nearly a hundred or more books that I have browsed through, all indicating that they were on the history of San Diego County, all except one, moved into the history of the City of San Diego by the second or third chapter. Gathering very little bits of information from the different books, I have put together a very poor excuse for history, but it wasn't for not trying. Even the County web site quickly got into more of the government part of the history than the settling of the county itself.

Source: "Cabrillo National Monument" by Joseph E. Brown

On Sept 28, 1542 Portuguese navigator Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo approached a massive headland now called Point Loma and entered San Diego Bay. There was of course, no dredged channel in the bay in those days, no lighthouse beacon or other aids to navigation as we know them today.

Today 144 acres of the headland which beckoned this explorer is Cabrillo National Monument. It is the south westernmost point of land in the continental US.

There has been a long parade of visitors since Cabrillo's time. Explorers and buccaneers, probing and mapping the western shore. Missionaries, adding the establishment of Christianity to the quest of material riches as reasons for Spain's conquest of the New World. Later came hunters of sea otter and whale, seekers of minerals and commercial fishermen. There have been countless warriors as San Diego Bay has been the staging area of no less than six wars since the first military vessel called here in 1846. Finally there have been scientists on their way to unlock the secrets of the deep.

In 1860 San Diego proper was centered around the remains of the Spanish presidio on Presidio Hill. The population of the village and neighboring farms totaled 724 persons. Of these 459 were white settlers and 268 Indians. San Diego county, which then included Imperial and Riverside counties, had an enumerated population of less than 5,000 persons in 1870.

The first settlement in the area was Alta California at Old Town in 1767. In 1867 Alonzo E. Horton was responsible for the "founding " of the New San Diego.

Source: The San Diego County Web site:

The County of San Diego was established by the State Legislature on February 18, 1850, as one of the original 27 counties of California.

A Court of Sessions was created that same year to handle administrative affairs of County government, but was replaced in 1852 by a five-member Board of Supervisors, also created by the Legislature. The San Diego County Board of Supervisors held its first meeting on January 3, 1853 when the County was divided into supervisorial districts.

At the time of its creation, San Diego County had a population of 798 and covered nearly 40,000 square miles. Included in the original County boundary were the present Counties of San Diego, Imperial, Riverside, San Bernadino and the eastern portion of Inyo.

Today, San Diego County covers approximately 4,255 square miles - 65 miles from north to south and 86 miles from east to west. San Diego County is the second largest in the state with a population of more than 2.6 million.

The County draws its name from San Diego de Alcala, a designation credited to Spaniard Don Sebastian Vizcaino who sailed into what is now San Diego Bay on November 12, 1603, and renamed it in honor of his flagship and, it is said, his favorite saint. The site was actually discovered 61 years earlier by Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo who had named it San Miguel.

In 1851 Los Angeles County was cut from the northern part of San Diego County as they were too far from the county seat. Prior to this division San Diego County was larger than 12 states of the Union. San Bernadino County was subsequently cut out of the very large Los Angeles County. In 1851 San Diego county then became twice the size of Mass. In March of 1893 Riverside County was cut from the northern area and in 1907 Imperial County from the eastern area, leaving the current size of the county that is slightly less than the size of the state of Conn.

This book is a reprint of the original that was printed in 1883 and was the first history book on the two counties. It provided the information that was what I was looking for, about the people and why they came.

The Missions (that have long been very historical in California and that every 4th grader has to study) were designed by Mexican Catholics for the civilization and conversion of the Indians, who were the original settlers of California.

Ranchos were "public farms" that were for the use of soldiers. They were 4-5 leagues distant from the presidios. Little use was made by the soldiers and they were left pretty much in a state of nature.

In 1850 the population of San Diego County was 2,287. 1860 it was 4324. 1870 it was 4951 and 1880 8620. Gold was discovered in San Diego County, mainly in Julian in 1870. By 1900 the population of the county was 35,000.

Climate was very attractive, as it is today. Rain falls usually between October and May, for 1 to 2 days. The interval between rainfall usually, one month to six weeks. When it rains the grasses grow and the hills turn green. The thermometer seldom goes below 37. Grains are sown in Jan. to March. The valleys from San Diego to San Bernadino in the central portion of the county area, were where the great land boom of the 1880's began as the land was fertile and excellent for growing semi tropical fruits. Grapes for Raisins, citrus of many varieties, walnut, almond and fig. Grains were also grown and stock was run on the many acres of unused land. There were also saw mills using the trees that lined both the east and western edges of the valleys.

Cattle were raised for their hides and tallow. When the time came to round them up and slaughter them, nothing was used except the hides and tallow. The bodies were left to rot on the land. Milk was of a grey color and not used at all. Milk and butter were bought from the Russians. (further information on them didn't seem to be available)

Bees keeping was popular and were raised for their honey. There wasn't much agriculture for them to feed on but they used the natural products such as the different varieties of sage. Since bee keeping depends on water, the drought of the 1860's caused a decrease in the raising of bees.

Raisins were very popular and profitable. One chart shows the profit of $500.00 an acre.

Olives, chickens and hogs also did well in San Diego as they seemed to thrive disease free, as did many of the crops.

The religions that were in the county in 1882 were: Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Congregational, Episcopal, and Masons.

Outdoor and leisure activities that the settlers participated in were mainly hunting the quail, ducks, deer and rabbits that inhabit the area. There were no game birds like they were used to seeing in the eastern part of the country.

The county's population explosion came from a concentrated effort of land developers in the 1880's to entice people westward. By 1882 the railroad had arrived and became a very influential part of the changes. Prior to the railroad, travel was by stage and or horseback.

As to Indian lands, the white people took what they wanted. Numerous high sounding treaties and promises were negotiated, guaranteeing protection to the Indians, but were never ratified by the US Govt. Squatters by the hundred settled on lands which they claimed were unoccupied. Their slogan was "might makes right".

Some writers have pictured life in the old rancho days as one long fiesta, enjoyed by gay caballeros and beautiful señoritas without a care or worry in the world. Such a picture is unrealistic. A very few rancheros were wealthy, and had beautiful haciendas. Many of them made pretense to affluence, while living in squalid adobe houses of one or two rooms without wooden floors, frequently no running water, and sometimes with only the barest necessities to keep soul and body together. To such life could not have been glamorous, but it was what most of the people were accustomed to, in the years before the Americans came.

The first decade of Americanized Californians saw the rancheros largely an impoverished unhappy people. Then in the winter of 1861-62 there was a month long deluge followed by a year of extreme drought, which sealed the doom of many of the Southland's big cattle ranches. As the Americans came into the country, some of the vast holdings that had survived the Land Commission and the Weather, were sold; and the Boom of the 80's witnessed the dismemberment and subdivision of many of the big old land grants. Since then the breaking up of large acreage's has been gradual but steady. By 1965 this development completely obliterated hundreds of old landmarks.

From other sources, bits and pieces I picked up from the many books too numerous to mention that I looked through.

San Diego County was made up of many Ranchos in the early years. These ranchos were many miles apart. As fruit growing and mining became more popular and people began to come to the county little by little the rancho owners decided to sell their lands. In the 1880's citrus growing became popular in the northern part of the then existing part of the county and people were able to buy small plots of farm land to raise citrus. People came from all over the United States, to start a different life. Vines also were planted by others to raise grapes and produce wine. Since San Diego County is desert land, water was a big issue in any plans to grow anything although in the early years the rivers provided sufficient water for all of the crops until the population began to grow and then it became a problem. Several water projects were created to transport water from northern and central California to the deserts of Southern California, which still supply water today.

I have chosen not to include the wars and Indian raids that went on between the different factions. That's not to say they weren't important, I just chose to leave it out.

Since even the current county is so large, it is larger than many states, it isn't practical to visit each cemetery, church, city, newspaper etc. to obtain records. I have searched through the following libraries in the area in order to gather the following records as I know these facilities have genealogy information. Libraries: San Diego City Main Library: Family History Library, S.D.: Carlsbad City Library, Genealogy Department: San Diego Genealogy Society Library.

 D.W & Ella RANNELLS

David Watson RANNELLS and Ella Jane Cooley, married in Kanas in 1881, arrived in S.D. by train Dec 10 1887, with Nathan L(12/27/82), Kate Emma (2/18/84) and Charles Grover (2/6/86). They stayed at 16th & K at first, later moving to a place further out of town at 5th & B. It was here that Mary(7/88) died May 30 1889. Feeling the need of country living they purchased 60 acres at Miramar, (then called Linda Vista) across now hwy 163 from the Scripps' Ranch. Here were born William Clarkson 5/25/90, David Watson Jr 3/24/93, John Stone 8/14/95. They lived here for 10 years and even though they had two reservoirs and windmill on the property they had to leave after seven years drought, when they had to bring their drinking water from the Los Penasquitos Ranch.

They moved to Cypress Grove. It was here that John died in 1901. From here they moved to La Jolla in 1904 where D.W. and Nathan established the La Jolla Livery Stable to rent out horses and carriages. As La Jolla grew Charles became the agent for the American Express Railway; Will established the La Jolla Dairy, located where the high school is now. He used to herd his cows in what is now Muirlands. Nathan was appointed Postmaster of La Jolla by Woodrow Wilson and re-appointed by Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Kate graduated from the Normal School in 1904 and taught in Miramar until she married another La Jollan Fred A. Wetzell. They had three children, Fay Anna, Frederick Jr and William. Fay Anna is deceased. Kate is the only one of the children of D.W. and Ella Rannells still living. She lives in San Diego.

Nathan married Mary Goode and they had no children. Will married Ella Welch and they had no children. Charles married Mrs. Myrtle Ayres Creveling. She had a son Warren and they had three daughters; Katharine, Bernice and Myrtle. Only Bernice is still living and she lives in La Jolla. (Accompanied by photo)

The California Great Register

The California Great Register, was the register of people that signed up to vote. These records covered many years from 1866. The 1890 has been used to replace the lost census. Many genealogical societies in Calif. have begun to put them on computer to make them available to everyone. It asked 1 age, 2 country of nativity, 3 occupation, 4 local residence, 5 naturalized date, 6 locality, 7 date of voting registration. (SD county lines changed in the NE part of the county in 1893 to Riverside Co. *) Some of the original records even showed height, complexion, color of eyes and hair color, as you will see in the 1890 records. Not all counties did the registration the same.

The records below have been copied by the San Diego Genealogical Society. They didn't include the height etc. as the originals don't have that information until the 1890.

There may be misspellings in names and errors in dates due to the difficulty in reading some of the fiche printouts. There were too many pages to type the information off the fiche, plus the fact that they were 45 miles from my home. I apologize for any errors. If a corrected spelling/date is VERY necessary, contact me and I will re-check the fiche on my next visit to the library.
